Waste Concern, Bangladesh

Co-founders of Waste Concern, Bangladesh are included in the list of 100 Asian pioneers of purpose economy for turning waste into an environmentally responsible fertilizer. Waste Concern is solving three major problems, waste management problem in the urban areas of Bangladesh, depletion of organic matter from the soil of rural areas and green house gas emissions from landfill sites, with a single solution of converting organic waste into compost. A. H. Md. Maqsood Sinha & Iftekhar Enayetullah turned this opportunity into a company that turns household waste into bio-fertilizers that are sold nationally. The company is also assisting the development of similar models in Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Nepal and Vietnam
